ABSTRACT

A virtualization switch and method for executing at least SCSI commands and performing virtualization in a in a Storage Area Network. The virtualization switch optimizes the data received from the network to fit the capacity of the target storage devices, thus providing higher throughput and low latency. The virtualization is preformed within the data path between the hosts and the storage devices and without the assistance of devices, such as a management stations or agents installed in the hosts.

10

5

15